

III-LSE Postdoctoral Programme

December 13, 2021

Applications are open for the inaugural cohort of the postdoctoral programme of the International Inequalities Institute at the London School of Economics and Political Science. We are recruiting for two positions, each of them two years in duration. They are open to scholars with a recently completed PhD (or one nearing completion) in a social science such as – but not restricted to - Economics, Political Science, Sociology or Social Policy.

The programme is intended to provide these scholars with an opportunity to pursue high-quality original research in an inequality-related topic, while collaborating with more established III researchers on existing projects.

Both positions in this first cohort will have an emphasis on quantitative research involving international comparisons. The first position will focus on the measurement and analysis of intergenerational mobility and inequality of opportunity. The second position will focus on cross-country comparative analysis of income or wealth distributions and will be associated with the new UK Satellite Office of the LIS cross-national data centre, which has just been launched at the Institute.

Applications will close on 15/01/2022 and successful candidates are expected to start by September 2022 at the latest (but possibly earlier). LSE is an equal opportunity employer and women, minorities and people with disabilities are encouraged to apply.

Please find a full job description, person specifications and additional details here:

- Opportunity, Mobility and the Intergenerational Transmission of Inequality
- Comparative Economic Inequality

Please feel free to circulate this announcement to colleagues and others who may be interested.

Francisco H.G. Ferreira
Amartya Sen Professor of Inequality Studies
Director, International Inequalities Institute
London School of Economics
