

CISEPS 2023 Annual Workshop

Tackling Inequality: Challenges, Research, and Policies

The Center for Interdisciplinary Studies in Economics, Psychology and Social Sciences (CISEPS) is organizing an international workshop entitled “Tackling Inequality: Challenges, Research, and Policies”, which will take place at the University of Milan-Bicocca on the 14th of April 2023.

The workshop aims at fostering an interdisciplinary debate involving economists, political scientists, statisticians, and other social scientists towards a better understanding of inequality. The CISEPS Workshop encourages contributions about new theoretical/methodological approaches and applied research from public economics, behavioral economics, experimental economics, statistics and other quantitative disciplines.

The following list illustrates, but does not exhaust, possible topics:

- Inequality broadly defined (e.g., income, wealth, debt, gender, race, class, education, space) and its perceptions
- Causes and consequences of inequality
- Public policies to address inequalities (e.g., redistribution, taxation, and poverty alleviation, educational programs)
- Multidimensionality of inequality (e.g., social and political exclusion, precarity, marginalization, discrimination)

Special sessions devoted to particularly innovative approaches may be organized.

Participation of interested researchers and policy makers from all countries is welcome.

Scientific Committee: Elena Bárcena-Martín (UMA, Spain); Andrea Brandolini (Bank of Italy); Roberto Iacono (NTNT, Norway); Maria Marino (UB, Spain); Alessandra Michelangeli (UNIMIB, Italy), Xavier Ramos (UAB, Spain), Gaston Yalonzky (Leeds, UK).

Organizing Committee: Alessandra Michelangeli (UNIMIB); Jurgena Myftiu (Insubria), Kateryna Tkach (UNIMIB), Umut Turk (AGU, Turkey).

Authors of accepted papers will be invited to submit their work for publication (upon successful peer-review) in Journal of Income Distribution.
